Reimagining the Role of Sport in Juvenile Justice

Learn about how sport is being used as a healing tool at several local youth detention centers.

Speakers will reflect on their past and current experiences in “Project Flex — A Fitness Leadership Program for Incarcerated Youth” created by Jenn Jacobs, Ph.D. and Zach Wahl-Alexander, Ph.D. from Northern Illinois University’s Department of Kinesiology and Physical Education. Those passionate about criminal justice, sociology, physical activity, and community development will hear testimonies and stories from those most impacted by sport in the prison system.

Thursday, Feb. 16 • 11 a.m. to 12:30 p.m. • HSC Sky Room
